Greetings Again to You Fellow Car & Truck Enthusiasts...

Rob Parr, Publisher

I want to personally express my gratitude to each and every one of our readers and sponsors for embracing Collector Car Guide (CCG) for this 2026-27 edition! For this record year, many new 4+ Star Businesses have joined our team. Thanks to you, not only have we broadened our scope of services, but have offered you more choices in major categories (although we like to tout that each business has its own unique niche). Since the advertisers throughout these categories generally do not ask, kindly mention that you found them in Collector Car Guide!

Eric Monterastelli, CTO

It is true that most members of our audience consistently seek out our professionals for various repairs, services, modifications or other improvements to their dream car or truck. However, our “do-it-yourself” followers still occasionally reach out to our supplier sponsors and other experts for their help on certain projects where they want to ensure the job is performed 100% correctly (or at least to avoid “cutting corners”).

In the past two years, we have seen an uptick of government intervention in our hobby. Sometimes it supports our pastime such as in the case of Pennsylvania legislation proposing to increase usage of collector vehicles or West Virginia limiting the increase of assessed property value.

Conversely, government opposes us through restrictions, increased fees and taxes such as in Maryland, resulting in the founding of the Maryland Collectible Auto Association. The MCAA (see page 23) supports Our Mission (on page 22) so we urge you to obtain your free membership! This publication generally does not address politics, but when forces such as the Democrat-run General Assembly in Annapolis threaten our hobby, we will use it as a bully pulpit to denounce any proposed scheming on their part or to support repealing recent legislation. Online, we have recently covered the various changes to Maryland historic tags and imposed taxes and fees.

Speaking of online, www.CollectorCarGuide.net has reached a new height of 1500 unique visits per day as our content continues to grow! So again, I have to express my sincere appreciation. Please continue to keep this CCG copy handy or regularly revisit (bookmark) our website in case you need help to keep your special vehicle on the road. If you have not already done so, sign up for our FREE online newsletter to receive the latest automotive news. I hope to see you on the road.—R. P.

What are the Benefits of Selling a Vehicle Through Consignment?

When it comes to selling your classic or special interest vehicle, consigning with a reputable consignment company removes all the headaches and aggravation of selling your pride and joy. It also helps protect you from frauds and scams.

A professional classic vehicle consignment company can present your vehicle to a worldwide audience with professional photographs and a thorough, informative, and accurately written description. This marketing can be the difference between a sale at the proper price and the potential buyer looking at other options.

The days of a two-sentence description are gone because people want to understand the history, provenance, running status and decoding of the drivetrain, trim tag and vehicle identification number (VIN).

Selling a car privately can lead to the potential for scams and frauds which can cost you an enormous amount of money. A professional consignor can institute extra precautions to ensure the sale is legitimate, secure, and safe and you get the money you deserve without any worries. With a professional handling the sale, the pitfalls of forged checks and scams are eliminated.

A business that ships cars every day will have a list of reputable transportation companies to help the buyer get the car to its new home, making it easier to sell worldwide. Most private sellers are limited to selling to a small range around their home, limiting the chances of selling it quickly at the desired price.

A professional consignor will also have a list of third-party inspection companies that allow a potential long-distance buyer to feel more at ease knowing a fresh set of neutral eyes is looking at their potential purchase. Plus, once everything has been processed, a professional consignor can safely complete the transferring of funds, saving the seller from potential scams.

Provided complements of Classic Auto Mall. Located in Central PA, less than two hours away from most Collector Car Guide readers, Classic Auto Mall showcases a variety of classic and specialty vehicles of various makes and models. Pontiac Celebrates a Century of Excitement!

In 1926, Pontiac joins Oakland only to replace it by 1931. Upon introducing its Wide-Track Design in 1959 under the team of "Bunkie" Knudson, Pete Estes and John DeLorean, Pontiac established itself as GM's performance division. DeLorean, along with marketing guru Jim Wangers, are credited for creating and marketing respectively the "first muscle car"—the GTO, in 1964.

Dash Cams: Protect What's Yours!

Dash Cameras are a device that unfortunately have become more of a necessity than a luxury. People are not as honest as they used to be and avoid consequences whenever possible. The good news is a quality dash camera that is professionally installed can record video footage to prove innocence or ensure guilt. Here are some important things to consider:

The video footage will be of no use to you unless the clarity is there. So, you need a camera that works well in low light conditions, can combat glare, and have high enough resolution that the video file will be useful in a court of law.

The camera needs to be properly aimed and calibrated in order to capture the image you need, when you need it.

Always get a professional grade camera and have it professionally installed. Well over 90% of the dash cameras on the market are cheap products being sold as a “reboxer,” meaning they should be avoided. Find a prime manufacturer that has an in-house engineering team for the best results. The wires will be hidden, and you will have a cleaner, less obtrusive device.

Considering an Upgrade to LED Lights in Your Vehicle?

Since the advent of LED (light emitting diode) automotive bulbs, many enthusiasts have considered upgrading their vehicle lighting systems. Except originality purists, many enthusiasts are open to the benefit of increased visibility at night while maintaining their stock light housings and lenses. Further, LEDs last longer and give off less heat which should help preserve lamp sockets. For a modified lighting look, there are even specific aftermarket kits that come with the bulbs, housings, lenses and hardware made for popular vehicles.

For most vehicles—1985 and older, direct replacement from traditional bulbs to LEDs for outer lighting is a simple job for even a beginner do-it-yourself project. Non-flashing lamp replacement is straight forward. Front parking lights, brake, back-up and side markers can be replaced as easily as burned out bulbs. LED replacements utilize the same bulb (part) numbers that can be found in the bulb chart located in your owner's or shop manual.

However, for flashing lights, there is one caveat. If you are replacing all bulbs that flash, you will need to replace the flasher relay or add a resistor since the older mechanical relays expect a specific current draw. Otherwise a hyper-flashing condition will occur similar to when a traditional bulb in the circuit has burned out by lowering its total draw. Installing an electronic flasher relay is a better option than the installing a resistor. Resistors get hot and must be mounted away from plastics and wiring to prevent their damage.

For LED headlights, the only real option is to go with products specifically manufactured for your car/truck. Otherwise, generic LEDs may not fit properly and would be difficult to adjust for optimal visibility.

There are various other headlight upgrades such as HID projector lights that may provide a better application for your vehicle. Regardless of any increased candlepower headlight you choose, consider adding a relay to protect your headlight switch.

Inside your vehicle, you may appreciate the increased visibility of even your stock instrument panel and gauges, making your nighttime driving experience more enjoyable. Overall, with the cost of incandescent bulbs on the rise, and the additional benefits aforementioned, now may be a good time to consider a lighting upgrade.

Check Your Electrical Wiring

Let's face it—of all automotive systems, the electrical system is the most neglected system we have in our collector cars. It is usually forgotten until a wire, fuse, relay or other electrical component fails or shorts out. Even after a repair is successfully performed, no further steps are usually considered with the possible exception of preventing a safety hazard.

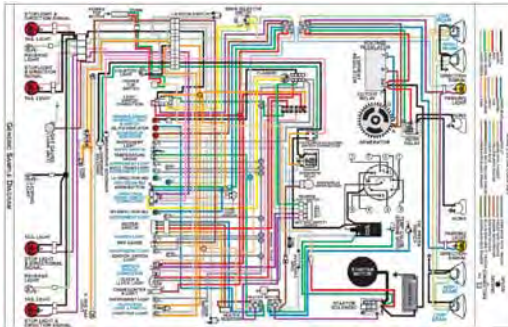

If you have never done so on your 40+ year old collector car, take a proactive approach now by checking electrical connections and grounds, especially under the hood where heat can really take its toll on wiring. Electrical gremlins can arise over years due to corroded connections, especially on overlooked grounds. To fully restore these connections, disconnect all the contacts. Once removed, sand both sides of each connector and the contact point where the ground wire is mounted down to bare metal to restore a solid connection. It would not be a bad idea to also replace the hardware at this time with stainless steel pieces when reconnecting these contact points. (Once everything is back in place, you can repaint those areas.)

If you really want to be thorough and have years of trouble-free operation, consider replacement of the entire wiring system or sections such as engine bay, dash panel or trunk area wiring. Today, several companies can match your original wiring with your input as far as the options that came with the car when new such as transmission type, A/C (or lack of).

Little Known, Yet Important Facts You Need to Know About Collector Car Insurance

You may be aware of some fundamental differences between Collector Car Insurance and traditional auto insurance such as limited usages, mileage and agreed value. However, there are other important nuances you should question when you compare insurance providers.

Just as in the case of any insurance policy, the goal of the collector policy is to make you whole after an accident. To make you whole again in terms of repairing or replacing your damaged classic, ensure your carrier meets your “agreed value” to sufficiently cover any loss.

You should re-evaluate this value prior to your policy’s renewal. If your current carrier wants to challenge your “agreed value,” provide photos and/or a valid appraisal from a certified appraiser; or otherwise shop for a company that will accept your value.

As far as usage is concerned, did you know that some collector policies offer various custom options such as 1,000, 3,000 or unlimited total mile limits per year? Do you know if it will cover you whether or not you are within sight of your car at a show, with or without a trailer and spare parts? Similar to a standard auto policy, you may also be able to vary your amount of liability, and add uninsured motorists property damage, personal injury protection, pet injury, disaster relocation and towing reimbursement.

Collector policy holders should also inquire about various discounts for multiple collector vehicles, violation free drivers, car club memberships, anti-theft home and fire alarms, and when you pay your policy in full.

Also consider a separate umbrella policy that can upgrade your liability limits.

TIP—Help Protect Your Soft Convertible Top

Make sure that the top folds evenly when dropping it (as well as when putting it up) to protect the material and mechanism. Do not leave a convertible top in the down position overnight. After the temperature cools, it may cause contraction and stretching of the soft top when putting it back up. This will reduce unnecessary wear and excess wrinkling when restoring it to the up position.

When is a Good Time to Upgrade a Drivetrain?

With the influx of restomods, more hobbyists, (especially those who want to drive their collector vehicle more frequently) are considering upgrading their ride. Except those purists that insist on maintaining stock appearance and performance, many enthusiasts ponder the aspects of improve-specifications in order for them to work together in harmony. The process presents fitment, mechanical or electrical issues that must be addressed at a higher unknown labor cost.

But today, a better alternative to upgrade a drivetrain is through a “systems approach.” Fortunately, LS, Coyote and Mopar drivetrains are readily available both new and used for virtually any vehicle.

These complete drivetrains also come with ECUs and wiring harnesses that can be programmed for optimal performance and economy. You can use stock fuel injection or easily adapt to stand-alone after-ments. One of the reasons for not upgrading in the past has been a devaluation when it's time to sell. But in the past 10 years, tasteful modifications now command higher prices over stock!

Another significant time enthusiasts consider an update occurs when their engine or transmission blows up or nears the end of its life. The expense of replacing or rebuilding a motor or trans makes for the consideration to go in a modified direction instead.

Up until recently, most equipped shops would regularly swap engines with “crate motors” and stock transmissions with over-drive transmissions. This “old school” approach frequently requires the adaptation or fabrication of parts that have different market fuel systems. The end results are more power, more control, reliability and economy without modifications. It's simply “plug and play” at a lower cost to you!

Why Your Independent Garage is Your Best Option

For those of us who do not wrench on our own car (at least on large repairs), consider developing a relationship with a reputable local shop, such as those listed below. Quality local independent shops prioritize customer satisfaction to provide you only the services and repairs you actually need. Their employees are usually paid by the hour. Through the expansion of a satisfied customer base, many independent shops maintain a steady workflow, which keeps them trustworthy. In contrast, large chains and car dealers employ service writers (and even mechanics) that are compensated on a commission basis. Avoid any chain that pays commissions as this provides incentive to pad your bill. To increase profit margins, they may also install lower quality parts with higher markups. They often have higher employee turnover as well, utilizing techs that may not have as much knowledge or experience. Chains often provide offers for a low-cost oil change with a free inspection. This "doorbuster" option provides them the opportunity to perform repairs or replace parts that are not necessary.

TIP: Know the manufacturer dates on your tires before you complete your purchase! For vehicles that are driven regularly: cars that are parked outside only have about a 10-year shelf life for safety; for those garaged, 15 years or less. Look for stamped oval next to DOT code. Focus on the last four digits in the oval. The first two represent the week of the year and the last two are the year. For example: 3511-35th week of 2011.
